Others

- Israel said it has severed contacts with the UN Human Rights Council after its launch last week of an international investigation into settlements in the occupied West Bank. The decision, announced by a Foreign Ministry spokesman, Yigal Palmor, meant that the fact-finding team the council planned to send to the West Bank will not be allowed to enter the territory or Israel. "We are not working with them any more," Palmor said about the Geneva-based forum. "We had been participating in meetings, discussions, arranging visits to Israel. All that is over. "The ministry told Israel's ambassador to Geneva to ignore all phone calls from the body's chief commissioner Navi Pillay, A fact-finding team will also be barred from entering the occupied West Bank and Israel to investigate illegal settlement activity, the official added. Maannews (March 27, 2012)
- Representatives of the West Bank outpost of Migron reacted harshly on a High Court of Justice decision invalidating agreements reached between settler representatives and the government, which would have delayed the demolition of the settlement. Haaretz \(March 27, 2012\)
