- The Israeli Supreme Court held a hearing on the petition filed by the residents of Batn Al-Hawa neighborhood in Silwan, south of the Al-Aqsa Mosque against their displacement from their homes in favor of the settlement association "Ateret Cohnim". Dozens of residents of Batn Al Hawa neighborhood who received judicial reports and notices to evacuate their homes in the neighborhood for the Ateret Cohnim Association filed a petition to the Supreme Court against the evacuation decision. The Ateret Cohanim association is seeking to seize 5200 square meters under the pretext of being owned by the Jews from Yemen since 1881. The association started delivering judicial and eviction notices to the residents since September 2015. Thus, 84 families from the neighborhood - which received the notices - went to the Supreme Court, asserting in the petition that transferring the ownership of the land to Ateret Cohnim association by the "Israeli official" responsible for the land was done without any proof of ownership, especially since the targeted lands are "miri lands" and cannot be turned into a "waqf" as the settlement association claims. Rajabi explained that the Israeli official had used the "miri land" in the Supreme Court against the "waqf" of Kabanya Um Haron in the western part of Sheikh Jarrah in Jerusalem. The court approved his claims and decided that any miri land cannot be turned into a "waqf", and cancelled the "waqf" classification of the land and started evicting people from their homes. Rajabi pointed out that the danger of eviction orders threatens 1,200 people from Batn Al-Hawa neighborhood, most of whom were abandoned from their villages and lands in 1948. Today, Ateret Cohnim is trying to displace them again and control their properties. The committee called on local and international human rights organizations, Jerusalem neighborhood committees and the city's activists to attend the session scheduled for next Sunday in the Supreme Court to stop the displacement and confiscation of real estate and land and the displacement of the population in Jerusalem. - Some 300 new apartments are put to sale in the settlement of Beit El the West Bank as part of the Buyer's Price program—a government-backed apartment purchase lottery that offers land at below market prices for sale to construction companies who vow to offer the future apartments at the lowest possible price. The plan will be executed after a 10-year stalemate in construction in Beit El and is the biggest marketing move in the settlement since the Buyer's Price program was launched by Finance Minister Moshe Kahlon. The prices of the apartments offered for sale cost 20 percent less than similar apartments offered for sale in the market. The initial price for an 85 square meter apartment will be NIS 584,762, where as the initial price for a 100 square meter apartment will be NIS 676,514, and a 120 square meter apartment will be NIS 798,849. The apartments include a balcony, storage room, and parking. The program's goal is to transform the Beit El's southeast agricultural area to a residential neighborhood as well as unification and re-division of the lands, which will be allocated to building houses, public offices, commercial areas, routes, and a public open space. The plan is to build 296 housing units in five different complexes in Beit El, being the biggest and significant marketing move in the settlements since the program started. In the settlement of Ma'ale Adumim merely 44 housing units went on the market as part of the Buyer's Price program. The Civil Administration's Supreme Planning Council approved last October the marketing of 300 housing units—a promise Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu had given Rabbi Zalman Melamed and Beit El's settlers five and a half years ago, after Beit El's Ulpana hill's houses demolition. No houses have been built over the past decade within the boundaries of the Beit El Council, despite repeated promises to build new housing units. Kahlon's decision to lead the marketing of the housing units in Beit El coincides with his political positions on Israel's right to annex West Bank settlements, and with the political stalemate in talks with the Palestinians. (YNETNEWS 22 May 2018)

- Israeli Defense Minister Avigdor Lieberman (Yisrael Beiteinu) announced that the High Planning Council (the body in the Defense Ministry's which oversees all construction in the occupied West Bank) is expected to advance plans for 3,900 settlement units next week. Of that total, 2,500 units will reportedly receive final approval for construction and 1,400 will be advanced through the planning process. Peace Now estimates that 52% of the units will be located in isolated settlements. Lieberman – whom The Times of Israel and Haaretz note has repeatedly inflated settlement approval numbers in the past – said the specific plans set to advance will include: 400 units in the Ariel settlement (where a medical school financed by Sheldon Adelson was recently brought under Israeli domestic jurisdiction, in a case of de facto annexation. And where a future stop on the recently approved settler-only light rail is slated to be built.); 460 units in the Ma’aleh Adumim settlement; 250 units for an assisted living center in the Elkana settlement (where the settler-only light rail will also have a stop); 180 units in the the Talmon settlement; 170 units in the Neve Daniel settlement; 160 units in the Kfar Etzion settlement; 150 units in the Kiryat Arba settlement (where construction preparations for a new industrial zone – which in reality is a new settlement in Hebron – recently began); 130 units in the Avnei Hefetz settlement; 130 units in the Tene Omarim settlement; 80 units in the Hinanit settlement; 60 units in the Halamish settlement (where settlers have built a strategic outpost, with the protection of the IDF, in order to further restrict Palestinian access to the area); 45 units in the Ma’ale Efraim settlement; 40 units in the Avnei Hafetz settlement; 45 units in unspecified settlements. This will be the third meeting of the High Planning Council in 2018, in accordance with a reported agreement between Israel and the United States to consolidate and coordinate the number of times settlement plans are announced. The first regularly scheduled meeting of the year was in January, when 1,122 new settlement units were advanced, of which 352 received final approval for construction. The Council met again, unexpectedly in February, which Lieberman tried to minimize by calling it “less significant” because the majority of the projects approved were non-residential. In fact, the projects were extremely significant. All of the plans expanded the footprint of settlements located deep inside the West Bank – including plans for a race track and hotel in the Jordan Valley. One “unusual” plan even created a new outpost to house settlers evacuated from a different outpost (the Netiv Ha’avot outpost case that FMEP has covered in exhaustive detail). (PEACENOW, FMEP 25 May 2018)

- Following the defense minister’s announcement last week that he intends to approve 2,500 housing units in the settlements with immediate approval and another 1,400 units with preliminary approval, the Higher Planning Council (HPC) convened today (30/5/18) to discuss 31 construction plans in the settlements with 1,958 housing units. 1,536 housing units, approximately 80%, are in settlements that Israel would have to evacuate within the framework of a two-state agreement (according to the potential border line proposed by the Geneva Initiative). The plans include the establishment of two new settlements (Zayit Ra'anan and Brosh) by authorizing illegal outposts. Most of the plans (at least 1,500 housing units) are clearly outside the "built-up area" of the settlements. The HPC approved a plan for 92 housing units for settlers, only one kilometer from Khan al-Ahmar, a Palestinian village slated for demolition. TO READ FULL REPORT, CLICK HERE. - Throughout May, the Israeli Nature and Parks Authority has been hard at work confiscating Bab al-Rahmah Cemetery in East Jerusalem. Following years of unearthing graves, preventing burials, and installing wire fencing there, Israeli construction crews cordoned off the cemetery with a metal fence this month. The Israeli workers installing the metal fence are barring Palestinians from approaching the construction site or documenting changes to the landscape. The Israeli police supervising the fencing project are also detaining concerned Palestinians. Most recently, on May 25, 2018, Israeli forces detained Khaled al-Zeer at the site, alleging that he is banned from Bab al-Rahmah. Al-Zeer was also arrested in April when Palestinians from Silwan organized a sit-in in Bab al-Rahmah to protest the land confiscation and destruction of graves. Al-Zeer and a number of other protesters were issued temporary bans from the cemetery and al-Aqsa Mosque. On May 23, 2018, Israeli police sought to extend such bans for nine Palestinians for a period of 60 days, but the courts refused the request. (IMEMC 1 May 2018)

The INPA staff began digging up graves and land in the cemetery around 20 days ago. Officials returned to continue digging, which was noted as being “for the benefit of building a national [Israeli] park on parts of the cemetery’s land.” Last month, Israeli authorities placed metal fences around the parts of the cemetery that it intends on confiscating. The parts of the cemetery subject to confiscation and destruction contain the centuries-old graves of Muslim leaders. (IMEMC 4 June 2018)
- The Israeli Occupation Army (IOA) took over an archaeological house in the old town of Hebron and turned it into a military outpost. - The Israeli Occupation Army (IOA) started preparation work for the construction of a new military base on Palestinian lands, east of the southern West Bank city of Hebron. Dozens of IOA invaded the Palestinian lands in Wad al-Hasseen area, east of Hebron city, and started the preparation work. They brought heavy equipment, and concrete walls, and started the work on private Palestinian lands owned by Jaber family. The area where the military is preparing for its new camp is located near Keryat Arba' illegal settlement. (IMEMC 19 June 2018)
- Planning agencies recently approved two decisions that could create an unbroken stretch of Jewish construction from Jerusalem to Bethlehem in the West Bank. The decisions could also isolate the Palestinian village of Al-Walaja from the West Bank by sandwiching it between the settlement of Har Gilo and the fence that separates Israel from the West Bank. In late March, the Gush Etzion Regional Council's planning committee approved a plan to almost double Har Gilo from its current 400 families. The plan calls for building 330 new homes, as well as public buildings, a gas station, parks and other amenities. The plan is still in its preliminary stages. But if it is ever actually implemented, Har Gilo, which already hems Al-Walaja in from the southeast, would hem it in from the southwest as well. To the north, the village is hemmed in by the separation barrier. The plan would also create territorial contiguity between Jerusalem and the Gush Etzion settlement bloc, which is adjacent to Bethlehem. And just last week, the Jerusalem district planning committee's subcommittee for defense facilities made a separate decision that also moves Jerusalem closer to Gush Etzion and helps turn Al-Walaja into an enclave. The subcommittee approved relocating the Ein Yael checkpoint from its current location, near Jerusalem's southern entrance, to beyond the Ein Haniya spring. The decision is meant to prevent Palestinians from visiting Ein Haniya, which is due to open next week as the main attraction of Jerusalem's Metropolitan Park. But the new checkpoint will be located not far from the site proposed for Har Gilo's new homes. "Har Gilo's expansion and the checkpoint's relocation give us an opportunity to see the true significance of the greater Jerusalem plan,” said Aviv Tatarsky, a researcher for the group Ir Amim, which promotes Jewish-Arab equality in Jerusalem. “The expansion will create contiguity between Jerusalem and the settlements near Bethlehem, and also strangle Al-Walaja. These are two sides of the same coin,” he added. “The situation in which Israel chooses to expand settlements in a way meant to perpetuate its control over millions of Palestinians without citizenship cannot be sustainable. But when the day we finally understand this arrives, the price of fixing it will be much higher.” The Har Gilo plan still requires approval from Israel’s Civil Administration in the West Bank. Planning officials said it has been forwarded to the administration, but the administration hasn’t yet looked at it. Consequently, they couldn’t predict when, if ever, the plan would advance. But in any case, they said, it won’t advance without a green light from the government. Minutes from the Gush Etzion Regional Council’s planning committee show that at the meeting where the Har Gilo plan was approved, council members warned that the settlement’s infrastructure was insufficient even for its current population. Therefore, they said, no new homes should be built without addressing this problem. In the end, the planning committee approved the plan “subject to coordination” with Har Gilo’s local council. Implementing the plan would require rezoning state lands from agricultural use to residential construction and other uses. In addition, the plan must still be approved by Civil Administration officials, the administration’s Supreme Planning Council and the council’s subcommittee on settlements – a process that takes months at best and usually much longer. Essentially, therefore, the March decision was no more than a declaration of intent. But in principle, it is feasible because the land in question is state land. Ein Haniya, in contrast, was officially inaugurated about six months ago, though it closed immediately afterward due to a financial dispute between the Israel Nature and Parks Authority and the Jerusalem Development Authority over who would pay for its operation. Recently, however, the two agencies finally agreed to open the site – which contains an ancient pool, gardens and archaeological findings – and split the cost. The police had insisted that before the site opens, the Ein Yael checkpoint should be moved about 1.5 kilometers (0.9 miles) westward, closer to Har Gilo and Al-Walaja. The checkpoint’s current location allows Palestinians from the West Bank to visit Ein Haniya freely, whereas the new location will prevent them from visiting the site. Work began on moving the checkpoint even before the necessary permits had been obtained, but a court order halted it. Last week, however, the subcommittee on defense facilities finally approved the relocation, so the work can now resume and is expected to be finished shortly. The Har Gilo expansion plan and the relocated checkpoint are just the latest moves designed to create territorial contiguity between Jerusalem and Gush Etzion. The most notable was last year's opening of the Rosemary Junction, which connects Jerusalem's main artery, the Begin Highway, to Route 60, which is the West Bank's main north-south artery and the road on which Gush Etzion lies. The new junction has made it significantly easier for residents of Gush Etzion, Efrat and the South Hebron Hills settlements to reach the capital, because it eliminated the traffic jams at Jerusalem's southern entrance and gave them direct access to Begin Highway. Erection of Outposts

- The Israeli occupation Army (IOA) erected a military outpost in Jabal Sabeih area, on lands of Beita village south of Nablus City. The outpost was erected for the use of the IOA and will remain in the area for a period of Two weeks. (Wafa 10 June 2018)
- Israeli settlers erected mobile homes in Jabal Sabeih area, between Beita and Qabalan villages south of Nablus City, two months after it was dismantled. (Wafa 10 June 2018)
- A group of Israeli settlers installed a new illegal outpost on Palestinian agricultural lands in Bani Neim town, east of the southern West Bank city of Hebron. The armed settlers invaded the lands, owned by Ed'eis family in the al-Hamra area, and installed a tent, a mobile home, and a barn for their sheep. The new outpost was installed in twenty Dunams of Palestinian lands, only dozens of meters away from the illegal Bnie Havar settlement, which was also installed on private lands. The Israeli Occupation Army (IOA) invaded the area, and declared it a closed military zone, preventing the Palestinians, not the settlers, from entering it. (IMEMC 21 June 2018)
- A group of Israeli settlers installed an outpost on Palestinian lands in the al-Boweira area, close to the illegal Kharsina settlement, east Hebron city, in the southern part of the occupied West Bank. The settlers installed four mobile homes on the Palestinian lands, owned by several families, including Jweihaan, Eada and Abu al-Halawa. The settlers are trying to occupy 70 Dunams of Palestinian lands, to build a new settlement on top of a mountain that overlooks many neighborhoods in Hebron city. Several months ago, the settlers uprooted dozens of olive saplings, planted by the Palestinians from Eada family, on their own lands, in the same area. (IMEMC 26 June 2018)

- An employee of Israel's Civil Administration in the West Bank declared a certain plot of land state land and then, after leaving his job, set up an illegal outpost on it. The outpost, located in the Gush Etzion settlement bloc, now contains a farm and a guesthouse. The profits of these enterprises go to a company established by the former Civil Administration employee, Yossi Levitt. The outpost, Tzurei Ye'elim, was built entirely without permits. A demolition order was issued against one of its buildings but was never executed. The farm consists of several buildings spread out over 250 dunams (62 acres) and surrounded by 17,000 dunams of pastureland. Levitt and his partner, Moshe Ronen, also planted an olive orchard and vineyards, started a herd of sheep and built rooms for hosting workshops. The Civil Administration declared this land state land on November 24, 2013, and the outpost was established in 2014. Aerial photographs obtained by the group Kerem Navot show that Levitt began building the outpost immediately after he resigned from the Civil Administration. Determining which land in the West Bank can be declared state land is one of the Civil Administration's main jobs. First, it carries out surveys to find land that isn't being worked. Then, if it can prove through aerial photography that the land has lain fallow for many years, it can declare the site state land. In the case of Tzurei Ye'elim, Levitt was the Civil Administration inspector responsible for declaring the site state land. He is listed as such in Civil Administration records, and a Civil Administration planning official also confirmed this to Haaretz. The official stressed that Levitt no longer works for the agency. Even though the outpost is illegal, it could potentially be legalized because it's located on state land, the official noted. Moreover, he said, since the outpost is within the jurisdiction of the Gush Etzion Regional Council, the Civil Administration has no power to demolish it. Only the regional council can do that, and it supports the outpost. It even solicits donations for Tzurei Ye'elim on its website. "Yossi Levitt is a product of the corrupt symbiosis between large portions of the Civil Administration and the settlers," said Dror Etkes of Kerem Navot. "This symbiosis shows how deep the rot runs in this agency, which pretends to be professional when in fact it's a violent agency that Israel uses to take control of Palestinian lands in the West Bank." Levitt declined to comment, as did the Civil Administration. A source familiar with the case said plans to declare the site state land date back from before Levitt joined the Civil Administration. But he confirmed that Levitt actually signed the declaration. (Haaretz 29 June 2018)

Israeli Closures

- The Israeli occupation Army (IOA) closed with big rocks the main agricultural road leading to Shoshleh village south of al-Khader village in Bethlehem Governorate, for no apparent reason. The closure resulted in the detention of a number of Palestinian vehicles and farmers who were unable to exit the village and their agricultural land. This Israeli measure will deprive Palestinian farmers access to hundreds of dunums of agricultural areas in Thaher Az Zayyah, Ein Al Qassis and Al Hadaf. (WAFA 3 May 2018)

- The Knesset is expected to approve, in the first of three votes, a version of the proposed Nation-State Bill that includes a provision that allows for the establishment of communities for Jews only, even though representatives of the Attorney General's Office and the Knesset's legal department say it is discriminatory and unconstitutional. Also, the word "democracy" was struck from this version of the controversial bill, a move that the ruling coalition claims softened the proposal and abolished the subordination of the state's democratic values to its identity as a Jewish state. This alteration is expected to foil the bill's original purpose, which was to permit the High Court of Justice to take into consideration so-called Jewish national values when they clash with democratic ones. A further clause removed from the latest version was one calling for the subordination of all Israeli laws, including the Basic Laws that function as the state's quasi-constitution, to the provisions of the Nation-State Law itself. The new bill is also expected to privilege Hebrew over the Arabic language, though this is mainly a symbolic distinction. "Hebrew is the language of the state. Arabic has a special status, its speakers have the right to language-accessible state services. In practice, nothing in this clause shall do harm to the Arabic language's status just prior to the enactment of this Basic Law," the bill states. The parties in the ruling coalition agreed to support the bill only for the first round of votes in the Knesset, due to the opposition of some of the parties to the current version. MKs with Kulanu and Yisrael Beiteinu criticized the bill as discriminatory toward new immigrants who are not Jewish according to Orthodox religious law, and called for a number of changes to the bill. The Haredi parties expressed opposition to the bill on two fronts: opposition in principle to the Basic Laws as well to the bill's lack of distinction between Orthodox Jews and non-Orthodox Jews, treating them equally. According to an agreement reached by the coalition, the present version of the bill will be shelved after the Knesset vote Monday, and will presumably not be put to a second and a third vote in the current Knesset session. Nevertheless, this scheduled first vote represents a significant advance for the bill. "Even though there's currently no agreement that would enable the bill's approval in a second and third vote, its approval in the first vote will allow the coalition to advance it in the next Knesset session, starting from the place it stopped in this session," said a senior Likud figure speaking on condition of anonymity. "We believe an appropriate situation will be created in the current government that will make it possible to submit the bill to us for final approval despite the current opposition to it." (Haaretz 1 May 2018)

- The Knesset plenum approved Basic Law: Israel as the Nation State of the Jewish People in its first reading. Sixty-four Knesset members supported the proposition, while 50 MK voted against it. The bill passed a preliminary reading in May of last year. The bill will now go to a special committee chaired by MK Amir Ohana (Likud) for preparations for its next readings. The bill, commonly known as the "Nationality Law", was drafted by MK Avi Dichter and other lawmakers and seeks to anchor in a Basic Law the definition of Israel as the Jewish and democratic nation state of the Jewish people, as well as the state's symbols, Jerusalem as the country's capital, Hebrew as its official language and Arabic as a language with special status. MK Dichter presented the bill at the beginning of the session, saying, "The Nationality Law is the insurance policy we will leave behind for future generations. The State of Israel is the nation state of the Jewish people." "That is a clear, hard fact, but despite it all—70 years on—it is unfortunately not yet clear to everyone, and is certainly has not been anchored in any law," the Likud MK lamented. Tackling criticism levied against the bill, Dichter explained, "Each individual has rights as an individual, and the law does not address the rights of a populace or a resident as individuals, but rather the national character of the country. I think quite a few of the law's detractors have failed to actually read it." One such detractor was Meretz Chairperson MK Tamar Zandberg, who said, "This law is a perfect example of the phrase 'If it ain't broke, don't fix it' also has a second portion: 'If you try to fix something that isn't broken anyway, you can do damage, and lots of it.' This is what this law does: it doesn't do any good, but rather a lot of damage." What's so wrong with the phrasing of the Declaration of Independence? Could we not take that and make it a Basic Law? As a Jewish person, as a member of the Jewish people, who have received national recognition in the form of the State of Israel, I'm ashamed," she exclaimed. Zionist Union MK Tzipi Livni spoke against the bill as well, professing her belief that "defending our Jewish and democratic state from enemies is a task for the highest order, but the country should also be protected from the actions of its current government. A government that thinks, says and tells that democracy means the majority rules alone? Someone needs to send it to civics class." Yesh Atid parliamentarian Yael German echoed Livni's sentiments, who said, "The government thinks democracy is majority rule, and that alone. Democracy is not majority rule, democracy is a system of government in which values, civil rights and above all minority rights are preserved." The law did not face objections from merely the opposition, however, as Likud MK Benny Begin also spoke out against the law's language. "I'll hazard a guess that a Nationality Bill that does not afford equal rights to all of Israel's citizens will not pass its third reading, but in the meantime those annulling such a statement have the upper hand, making the bill faulty. I therefore cannot support it, both for what it omits and for what it includes," he stated. Begin's fellow party member MK Ohana, meanwhile, said he "did not know many laws that have been afforded special committees that will hold so many discussions on each article and each letter of the bill," adding the bill was sent to its first reading after a considerable number of changes were implemented. Joint List MK Ahmad Tibi concluded objections, saying, "What the law actually declares is that there are two kinds of civilians. One group comprised of Jews that has rights, and the other comprised of tolerable guests. The law practically determines Jews-only communities. If that's not racism, I don't know what is." Among the bill's other articles are ones setting the Hebrew calendar as the country's official calendar and enshrines Independence Day and other Jewish holidays, events and memorial days in law. The bill's explanatory remarks said, "The bill's aim is to enshrine in basic legislation the identity of the State of Israel as the nation state of the Jewish people, as well as adding a series of instructions to its constitutional framework dealing with the country's fundamental characteristics as a Jewish state." "The proposed Basic Law will join existing Basic Laws, anchoring other components in the State of Israel's character as a Jewish and democratic state, in light of the principles contained in the country's Declaration of Independence," the remarks concluded. Before reaching the first reading phase, the bill drew ire and scathing criticism from all flanks of the opposition, especially members of the Joint List. Haredi parties, however, were also uneasy with a bill defining Israel as the nation state of the Jewish people, thereby detaching the country's attachment to Judaism and the Torah, as per their members. Vincent Warren, executive director of the CCR and Katherine Franke, chair of CCR's board and Sulzbacher Professor of Law, Gender, and Sexuality Studies at Columbia University, were detained for 14 hours and interrogated at Ben Gurion International Airport, then denied entry into Israel and deported, arriving back in New York. - The house of a former chief military prosecutor in the West Bank, Maurice Hirsch, was built illegally on privately-owned Palestinian land in the settlement of Efrat, says Dror Etkes, a longtime monitor of Israeli land policy in the West Bank. "It's ironic that a person who for years was in charge of the rotten prosecution system in the West Bank lives in a house that could have been built only because of the rot that spread throughout the law enforcement system," Etkes, the founder of the nongovernmental organization Kerem Navot, told Haaretz. In 2009 the Supreme Court rejected the contractor's claim that the house had been bought from a Palestinian landowner, and in 2014 Israel's Civil Administration in the West Bank ruled the structure outside the area of state-owned land. Hirsch, currently a lieutenant colonel in the reserves, bought the house in 2012, shortly before he became chief military prosecutor in the West Bank. In that capacity, he was responsible for handling criminal charges against Palestinians. Hirsch left the army in 2016 and today serves as an adviser to NGO Monitor, a group that tracks other NGOs critical of Israel. Replying to Etkes' allegations, he told Haaretz: "That's revolting and immaterial." Construction of the two-family house began in 1994 without permits, and without the structure appearing in a master plan. The state allocated the land to the builder. Shortly after construction began, the Civil Administration ordered the house demolished but suspended the order when a new plan was submitted. In January 1999, the administration approved the plan and the status of the house, and the order was lifted. But then the builders and the Civil Administration began a financial dispute that went to the courts. In 2004, a magistrate's court ruled that the acquisition process had been proper. According to the ruling, the transaction was not registered because the sale put the seller's life in danger. But in 2008, a district court reversed the ruling and said the builders "brought not a shred of evidence that they had bought the lots." A year later the Supreme Court rejected the builders' appeal but, until 2014, the Civil Administration left the building recorded as being within the "blue line" marking state-owned land. For its part, the Civil Administration told Haaretz an illegal construction file had been opened, after which a stop-work order was issued and the building's owner was summoned before a supervisory subcommittee. At the start of 1999, the house was legalized in an approved master plan. The administration, however, did not mention that in 2014 the house was reclassified as not being on state land. - The Trump administration will ask Israel to withdraw from four Arab neighborhoods in east Jerusalem, which will likely become the capital of a future Palestinian state, US officials told Defense Minister Avigdor Liberman during his visit to Washington last week. The transfer of control over the neighborhoods – Jebel Mukabar, Isawiya, Shuafat and Abu Dis – was presented to Liberman as just one piece of the larger peace plan the administration has been working on over the last year. Israel, the officials indicated, would be expected to accept the plan once it is presented despite the potentially painful concessions. News of the demand come less than two weeks before the US Embassy officially moves to Jerusalem on May 14. The full plan is expected to be unveiled shortly after the embassy moves. US officials categorically denied the report, speaking to The Jerusalem Post. President Donald Trump's plan has not yet been completed but has entered its final stages of development. During his visit to Washington, Liberman met with Jared Kushner, Trump's son-in-law and senior adviser, National Security Adviser John Bolton, Secretary of Defense James Mattis, and the president's Middle East envoy, Jason Greenblatt. "We do not comment on the content of the minister's meetings," Liberman's office said in response to the report. Kushner and Greenblatt have been working on a peace plan together with US Ambassador to Israel David Friedman for the last year, and few details have leaked out. Alongside the concessions expected of Israel, the administration has promised its full support in the event of a widespread conflict with Iran or Syria. The administration has told Israel it would supply the IDF with significant support, including advanced weaponry, if a war broke out with Iran, even one instigated by Israeli action against Iran's presence in Syria. Last month, PA President Mahmoud Abbas said the Palestinians will not accept any US plan to resolve the Israeli-Palestinian conflict. "We honestly will not wait for anything from them, and we will not accept anything from them," Abbas said at a conference in Ramallah last month. (IPOST 4 May 2018)

- The committee on legalizing the issues of land ownership for the Jewish settlements in Judea and Samaria has finished its work and presented its final report. The 200-page report includes detailed – and unprecedented – recommendations intended to legalize thousands of homes built without proper permits throughout the West Bank, sometimes on what is privately-owned Palestinian land. The report examined all forms of unauthorized construction in the settlements and proposed a number of solutions to allow the legalization of thousands of housing units. The committee presented its report two months ago to Justice Minister Ayelet Shaked, Defense Minister Avigdor Lieberman, Agriculture and Rural Development Minister Uri Ariel and Attorney General Avichai Mendelblit. The defense, justice and agriculture ministers are responsible for implementing the committee's recommendations. Shaked said that she hopes the team established in the Prime Minister's Office to implement the recommendations will act quickly due to the urgency of the need to legalize the settlements. "We are acting responsibly and creatively and within a number of weeks we will present a comprehensive and systematic operational plan to legalize the outposts," added Lieberman. The committee was established as part of the government coalition agreements between Likud and Habayit Hayehudi, and after a security cabinet decision on the matter. The members of the committee, headed by now Jerusalem District Court judge Haya Zandberg and the former head of the Civil Law Division in the State Prosecutor's office, includes Dr. Chagai Vinizky of the Hebrew University in Jerusalem and the Defense Ministry's former legal adviser Ahaz Ben Ari. Zandberg was appointed to the bench earlier this year with the Shaked's active support. The first of the recommendations concerns a shift in policy on how the official boundaries of settlement communities are treated. In the past, the IDF's Civil Administration in the West Bank had a staff that examines these borders, known as the community's "blue line." This team was tasked with marking them precisely and checking that they include only lands owned by the state. However, as mistakes were made in the past in drawing these boundaries, many now include privately-owned Palestinian land. In the past, these plots were removed from the community's jurisdiction and retroactively disowned by the state. Now the Zandberg Committee has recommended stopping the work of the “blue line” team. As for the structures built on such land, which were retroactively declared to be private land after the homes were completed on what was initially considered state land, the committee recommends legalizing such construction. The legal basis for this is what is known as the Market Overt (Open Market) principle concerning property ownership, in which transactions conducted in good faith under certain conditions are considered valid – even if they have certain legal faults, such as in the sale of stolen goods. Such a rule could lead to the legalization of thousands of unauthorized housing units in both large and small settlements all over the West Bank. What complicates land ownership matters in the West Bank is that Israeli law does not apply to property ownership there. Instead, the property laws are broadly based on Ottoman Turkish law, even though both the British and Jordanians ruled the territory before Israel took possession in 1967. Generally, under Ottoman land laws, land is acquired by farming and working it. Therefore, when the IDF Civil Administration examines old aerial photographs and finds land that was once farmed, even if it is now inside a settlement, that land is retroactively categorized as privately-owned Palestinian land – even if it is not known to who it belongs, if anyone. At the same time, unworked land may be declared to be state-owned – if the land registry has no other registration or status for it. For example, ownership of some of the land was registered and legalized under the Jordanians from 1948 to 1967. They began conducting a process of examining the land ownership and determining precisely who the owners were, recording it in the official land registry. These are the privately-owned Palestinian lands with registered owners. Other parcels were in various stages of this process in June 1967, when Israel took control of the West Bank; others had not yet been examined at all. This is how some lands, though they were farmed at the time, are not considered to be state lands today, but at the same time their owners are unknown and unregistered. The committee's second recommendation concerns cases in which the settlement is built on state-owned land, but is considered an “island” in the middle of land that is not state-owned. For example, this is rather common when the community is built on the top of a mountain or hill, but the land below it in the valleys is private agricultural land. In planning terms, the committee is recommending using “the principle of flexibility for adjacent areas,” in which land can be zoned for building more easily if it is adjacent to already constructed areas. The purpose of this recommendation is to allow the construction of access roads or other development for “isolated” settlements surrounded by land that is not state-owned. The committee also made other recommendations in such cases, such as building bridges or tunnels to access these settlements. This is because “the ownership underground and [in the air] above the ground belongs to the state.” This would allow the construction of tunnels under privately-owned Palestinian land or bridges over it. In addition, the committee recommends allowing the use of “roads intended for public purposes” or “the expropriation of land for the purpose of an access road to a community,” all to be built on the privately-owned land. The committee also proposed another way to legalize “existing communities that were expanded” while “exceeding the boundaries of the lands held legally.” This is meant to apply to neighborhoods and unauthorized outposts on land that is not state land, but which were built as extensions of legal communities that were built on state-owned land. The committee recommended avoiding demolishing these homes because of the “delay” between the two types of legal statuses. The committee said that in general, “these structures were built over a decade ago, without any protest and with the support of the state.” One of the regular participants in the committee’s meetings was attorney Amir Fisher, the “adviser on settlement affairs” to Shaked; as well as Kobi Eliraz, the Defense Minister’s adviser on settlement affairs. Mendelblit headed the committee before he was appointed attorney general. Shaked chose Zandberg to replace him, even though she had no previous experience with the issue. (Haaretz 4 May 2018)

- Just months after recognizing Jerusalem as the capital of Israel, and days before moving the US Embassy there, Israeli media reports that US President Donald Trump now wants Israel to give part of the Holy City to the Palestinians. The Trump Administration has been working for months on a new Middle East peace proposal that seeks to address the major sticking points like control of Jerusalem and Palestinian refugees, rather than sidestep them until final-status talks, as all other proposals have done. Israel's Ma'ariv daily newspaper reports that when he visited Washington last week, Israel Defense Minister Avigdor Liberman was made privy to details of this new proposal, in particular the portion relating to Jerusalem. According to the report, Israel will be asked by Trump to relinquish four Arab neighborhoods on the eastern side of Jerusalem. Abu Dis (where the Palestinian Authority already has a parliament building), Isawiya, Shuafat and Jabl Mukabar would become the new Palestinian capital of "Al Quds." Jerusalem's Old City, it is reported, would be placed under international supervision. Already the plan would cut off some Jewish neighborhoods, like Pisgat Ze'ev, from the rest of Israeli-controlled Jerusalem.

Some fear this would be only the first step toward the Palestinian Authority claiming even wider swaths of the city. It was also reported that in exchange for accepting this proposal, Israel would receive total and unquestioned American backing in handling the Iran nuclear threat however it sees fit. US officials denied the report in remarks to other Israeli media outlets. (6 May 2018)

Municipal workers erected signposts reading “US Embassy” in Hebrew, Arabic, and English around the site, currently a US consular building, in the city’s Arnona neighborhood. US President Donald Trump announced on December 6 the recognition of Jerusalem as the capital of Israel and the transfer of the embassy, located until now in Tel Aviv. The embassy is to get a festive inauguration on Monday the 14th of May 2018. Small in size, it will initially occupy part of the consular work space pending project according to the US State Department. (TOI 8 May 2018)

- A new military order (Order No. 1797) will enter into effect. The order removes any option for Palestinians to challenge demolition orders that the Civil Administration issues for new structures, allowing Israel to demolish homes summarily. In polished legal language, the order sets forth that any Civil Administration enforcement officer may order the “removal” of a new structure – a term that includes both uncompleted structures and structures completed within the last six months. In the case of residential structures, enforcement officers may order their demolition if they are still unoccupied or within 30 days of occupancy. If the person in possession of the property has a building permit, they may file an application to have the demolition cancelled within 96 hours. However, if no such application is filed within this timeframe and the owners do not demolish the structure themselves, the enforcement officer may “remove the structure and anything attached thereto from the property”, so long as it is “not located within the confines of a detailed building plan”, and after consulting with the legal advisor or his representative. - Nati Rom, a settler from the illegal outpost of Esh Kodesh, is urging Switzerland to move its embassy in Israel from Tel Aviv to Jerusalem, after the United States, Guatemala and Paraguay all made the move. Rom's organization Lev HaOlam ("Heart of the World") turned to the Federal Democratic Union of Switzerland (EDU)—a minor political party—seeking their help in convincing the Swiss government to move the country's diplomatic representation in Israel to the capital. With the help of the EDU, Lev HaOlam submitted a petition to the Foreign Ministry in Bern, demanding to move the embassy. The petition was signed by some 20,000 people. "It's important to understand there are a lot of people who see the great hypocrisy in the treatment of Israel, and they won't have it," Rom said. "They support Israel, and the Lev HaOlam organization meets with them all the time. We hear voices, which are gaining in strength, of citizens from different countries who call for an end to the hypocritical treatment of Israel." In addition to the petition, the Lev HaOlam organization also sent the Swiss Foreign Ministry a care package from West Bank settlements, including oil, wine and chocolate. The EDU is a nationalist-conservative party, whose members say it has been working to move the embassy in Israel to the capital since the party's foundation in 1975. The party's core principles are based on the values of the Bible, and the party holds conservative positions on family, society and education. (YNETNEWS 22 May 2018)

- Israel called on the European Union on Friday to halt funding to more than a dozen European and Palestinian non-governmental organizations that it says promote boycotts against Israel, saying the financial support violates the EU's stated policy that it opposes boycotts against the Jewish state. Israel's Strategic Affairs Ministry published a report with a list of groups that it says receive EU funding and call for boycotts against Israel. It said some of the groups had links to terror groups while receiving EU money. The report was the latest salvo by Israel in its fight against a global movement calling for boycotts, divestment and sanctions. The movement has urged businesses, artists and universities to sever ties with Israel and it includes thousands of volunteers around the world. Supporters of the movement say the tactics are a nonviolent way to promote the Palestinian cause. Israel says the campaign often masks a more far-reaching aim to delegitimize or destroy the Jewish state. “The state of Israel expects the EU to act with full transparency and reveal the scope of its financial aid to organizations that have ties to terror and promote boycotts against Israel,” the report said. “Israel strongly urges the EU to fully implement in practice its declared policy of rejecting boycotts against Israel, and to immediately halt funding to organizations which promote anti-Israel boycotts and delegitimization.” The EU had no immediate comment. Israel said the NGOs received a total of 5 million euros ($5.9 million) in 2016, the last year for which data was available, according to the ministry report. It accused some of the NGOs of having links to Palestinian terror groups, listing among others Norwegian People’s Aid, which received more than 1.7 million euros ($2 million) in 2016 and claiming the group had links to Palestinian terrorist groups. The US Justice Department announced in April that the group reached a settlement with the United States over accusations that it had provided “training and expert advice or assistance” to the Islamic terror group Hamas, which rules the Gaza Strip, as well as other Palestinian terrorist groups and Iran. As part of the settlement, NPA “admitted to and accepted responsibility for its conduct” and agreed to pay more than $2 million. The US, along with the EU, considers Hamas a terror group. NPA said it wanted to see the list before commenting. Other groups singled out in Friday’s report included the British organization War on Want, the Dutch anti-war group PAX as well as a number of Palestinian groups, including PNGO Net, an umbrella organization that works to coordinate Palestinian civil society. Munjid Abu Jaish of PNGO Net called Friday’s report “another Israeli aggression against the Palestinian people and their institutions.” “We will continue our legal nonviolent struggle according to the international law, regardless of the results, because we believe in this path,” he said. The call to the EU follows other steps Israel has taken to ratchet up its fight against the boycott movement. Earlier this year, Israel identified 20 activist groups from around the world whose members would be banned from entering the country over their calls to boycott the Jewish state. For its part, the EU has recommended that its member states put special labels on exports from Israeli settlements in the West Bank. It has stopped short of banning settlement products, but they do not receive the same tax exemptions that products made in Israel receive. The EU has upheld the free expression rights of its citizens to call for a boycott of Israel but has stressed that the body opposed any boycott of Israel. In the years since its formation, the BDS movement has seen limited success among progressive audiences, persuading several church organizations to divest themselves of Israel-related investments and garnering support on US college campuses. Recently, pop singer Lorde joined a number of other artists who have canceled performances in Israel amid pressure from BDS activists. Even so, a slew of other musicians have defied boycott calls and performed. Israel has also enjoyed new economic partnerships and diplomatic ties despite calls for boycotts, and it has become a top destination for international sporting and cultural events. Earlier this month, Israel became the first non-European country to host stages of the Giro d'Italia cycling event. (TOI 25 May 2018)

- The Palestinian Government strongly condemned, on Thursday, a new Israeli military order affecting the so-called Area C, which amounts to more than 60 percent of the total area of the occupied West Bank and which is under full Israeli military and administrative control. “This illegal development would generate more crimes against Palestinian rights of access to a safe and stable living environment and would worsen the already dire conditions of 393,000 Palestinian citizens,” the government said in a statement issued by the Prime Minister’s Office. On May 9, the Israeli military published military order 1797 with the main objective of expediting Israel’s unlawful demolitions of Palestinian infrastructure in Area C. The new order further expands the authority of the Israeli army’s so-called “civil administration” to unilaterally target and demolish Palestinian structures within 96 hours, irrespective of the status of the underlying land or the issuing of building permits. According to Wafa, the Palestinian government said that it consistently strives to support Palestinian citizens residing in the so-called “Area C”, which includes supporting their resilience and protection from Israeli violations. However, it said, “it is important to mention that Palestinians living under a belligerent military occupation are, under the international humanitarian law, a ‘protected population’, which obligates the occupying power to protect the occupied population. Israel has not merely neglected its duties as an occupying power, but rather has proactively and willfully done the opposite, flagrantly violating the inalienable rights of the occupied Palestinian population.” It said that “despite of the international community’s constant rejection and condemnation of the Israeli illegal colonial practices, the new order comes as a measurement against International aid actors to prevent any legal action against future Israeli illegal orders, which has proven quite successful in preventing or delaying of the illegal demolitions until now. Therefore, Israel is using the new order to continue its unlawful demolition policies to drive Palestinian citizens away from their land and pave the way for the establishment of additional illegal colonial settlements.” The Palestinian government urged third states, international partners and the international community at large to take concrete steps against the Israeli government to rescind the military order, which it said violates article 49 and 53 of the Fourth Geneva Convention, as well as the recent United Nations Secretary-General Antonio Guterres statement, that “forcible transfer does not necessarily require the use of physical force by authorities, but may be triggered by specific circumstances that leave individuals or communities with no choice but to leave; this is known as a coercive environment.” The Palestinian government also called on the international community “to not only hold Israel accountable for its numerous violations of the rights of the Palestinian people, but also to tackle the root of the problem, namely Israel’s seemingly open-ended belligerent occupation, which prevents Palestinian citizens from ever achieving a just and fair peace based on the internationally-backed two-State solution.” In related news, the Palestinian presidency has condemned an Israeli court decision to demolish and uproot the Bedouin community of Khan al-Ahmar in the Jordan Valley, about 15 kilometers to the east of Jerusalem. “This policy of ethnic cleansing is considered to be the worst form of racial discrimination, which has become the predominant feature of the practices and decisions of the Israeli government and its various instruments,” said the presidency in a press statement referring to the Israeli decision. The statement continued: “The only objective of this abhorrent racist policy is to uproot the legal Palestinian citizens from their land to control it and to replace them with strange settlers.” The presidency called upon the United Nations and the signatories to the Geneva Conventions and other international institutions to take urgent action to prevent this ‘racist’ decision and to provide international protection to the Palestinian people. On the international spectrum, Al Ray Palestinian Media Agency reported that 76 members of the US House of Representatives signed a letter, addressed to Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu, demanding to stop the policy of destroying Palestinian homes in the occupied West Bank with the aim of expanding settlements. According to Haaretz, Democratic part members of Congress called for a halt to the demolition of Palestinian houses in Susya village, Hebron. It pointed out that US lawmakers drew conclusions from Netanyahu's view that, while the village of Susya is becoming piles of rubble, Jewish settlements in its surroundings are flourishing and expanding. The paper quoted a senior official of the liberal-leaning American Jewish organization, J Street, as saying that the move is considered to be, perhaps, the biggest move by Congress against the settlements. - In recent years there has been an increase in the threat of expulsion hovering over the communities of Sheikh Jarrah and Silwan in East Jerusalem. A wave of eviction lawsuits is being conducted before the courts, with well-organized and well-funded settler groups equipped with direct or indirect assistance from government agencies and the Israeli General Custodian. Sheikh Jarrah – Umm Haroun (west of Nablus Road) – approximately 45 Palestinian families under threat of evacuation; At least nine of them are in the process of eviction in the courts and at least five others received warning letters in preparation for an evacuation claim. Two families have already been evacuated and replaced by settlers. See map. Sheikh Jarrah – Kerem Alja'oni (east of Nablus Road) – c. 30 Palestinian families under threat of evacuation, at least 11 of which are in the process of eviction in the courts, and 9 families have been evicted and replaced by settlers. See map. Batan al-Hawa (Silwan) – about 100 Palestinian families under threat of evacuation; 84 of them are in the process of eviction in the courts; 14 families were evacuated and replaced by settlers. See map. The basis for all claims is the same: the Legal and Administration Arrangements Law enacted in 1970 by the Knesset determined that Jews who owned property in East Jerusalem and lost their property in the 1948 war, can receive it back from the Israeli General Custodian. The law was not applied to Palestinian land owners who lost properties in the same war and in the same circumstances, and did not take into consideration the fact that all of these Jewish owners had already received alternative assets from the state in 1948. Settler groups began to acquire property rights from the owners' heirs and succeeded in gaining control over Jewish trusts who owned properties before 1948. The Custodian General directly or indirectly assisted them in demanding the evacuation of the Palestinians from these properties, and recently launched a wave of eviction lawsuits against the Palestinian tenants. It is important to emphasize that most of the Palestinian families are families of refugees from 1948 and have entered their properties legally during the Jordanian period. (PEACENOW 27 May 2018)

- Bill aims to pave way for Israelis to return to four northern Samaria settlements evacuated as part of 2005 disengagement Pullout failed to achieve its stated aim of ensuring better security and better political and demographic reality, bill states. The Knesset was set to debate a bill Sunday that aims to lift the existing ban preventing Israelis from entering areas in northern Samaria from which Israel pulled out as part of the 2005 disengagement. In 2005, Israel evacuated all the Jewish settlements in the Gaza Strip, 21 in all, and four settlements in Samaria. After the four settlements – Kadim, Ganim, Homesh and Sa-Nur – were evacuated, Israelis were barred from traveling there. A new bill, sponsored by Habayit Hayehudi MK Shuli Mualem-Rafaeli and backed by several coalition members, calls for the lifting of this restriction. "Despite the expulsion of the Jewish residents from northern Samaria, no change has taken place with respect to the status of the area or the military presence on the ground," the bill explains. "Therefore, it makes sense that reverting back to before the disengagement will begin in northern Samaria." "To this end, it is proposed to annual the prohibition placed on the entry of Israeli citizens to the area and allow the Jewish settlers to return to the settlements from which they were uprooted," the bill said. The bill reasons that "the purpose of the 2005 disengagement was to facilitate a better security, political, economic and demographic reality, but the situation on the ground has proven it created the opposite." Habayit Hayehudi has introduced similar bills in the past, all of which were shelved by the coalition itself. (ISRAELHAYOM 27 May 2018)
- The Israeli government began construction of a marine barrier off the coast of the northern Gaza Strip which it says will be used to prevent the movement of the Hamas military wing, out of the besieged coastal enclave and into Israeli territory. The multi-million dollar project is expected to be completed by the end of 2018. The barrier will consist of three layers: an underwater level, topped by a layer of stone and an above-water barbed wire fence. The entire barricade itself will be surrounded by another fortified fence. The barrier will reportedly span 37 miles, and is expected to cost approximately 3 billion shekels ($833 million), with each kilometer of the underground part of the barrier costing an estimated 41.5 million shekels ($11.5 million). The costs of constructing the aboveground fence were reported to be at 1.5 million shekels ($416,000) per kilometer. (YNETNEWS 28 May 2018)

- Over the past year, the Civil Administration has revoked permits to work in Israel and in the settlements from hundreds of Palestinians, in response to attacks committed by residents of their communities with the same family name. Until May 2018, the Civil Administration revoked permits in three instances: in the vicinity of Yatta in the Hebron District, where the largest number of permits was revoked; around Beit Surik to the northwest of Jerusalem; and in Barta'ah a-Sharqiyah in the Jenin District. The workers and their families depend for their livelihood on these permits, which were revoked months ago and have not yet been returned. The longer the revocation, the greater the damage to the workers and their families. Workers report drastic changes they have been forced to make to their lifestyle following the revocation of the permits, and some state that they have fallen into debt. The workers have no way of knowing when, if ever, their permits will be reinstated and whether they should attempt to find alternative work in the West Bank, at much lower salaries. It is difficult for them to commit to a new place of employment due to the possibility that the permits could be reinstated at some point, allowing them to return to their regular positions. Revoking permits from Palestinians who have no substantive connection to perpetrators of attacks is part of a declared Israeli policy. Maj.-Gen. Yoav Mordechai, who until recently served as Coordinator of Government Operations in the Territories (COGAT), wrote following an attack committed by Palestinians on 17 June 2017 at Damascus Gate in Jerusalem, in which a Border Police officer was stabbed and killed, that Israel had decided on a number of steps. "The first", he stated, "is revoking 250,000 entry permits [for Palestinians visiting family in Israel] and revoking work permits from the kin of the terrorists." A few months later, following the attack in Har Adar in which two security guards and a Border Police officer were shot and killed, the Prime Minister announced that measures taken in response would include demolishing the terrorist's house, imposing a closure on the village of Beit Surik and revoking the work permits of his extended family. The revocation of the permits is not based on any claim that the workers were responsible for the attacks, involved in them in any manner, or even knew the perpetrators. The grave damage to them is due solely to the fact - meaningless in itself - that their family name is identical to that of the perpetrator. In the vast majority of instances, there is no actual relation between the two. Accordingly, the policy is completely unjustified and constitutes collective punishment, which is prohibited under international law. This policy is based on Israel's position that issuing work permits to Palestinians is a privilege or act of charity. Accordingly, Israel argues that it is entitled to revoke and reissue these permits at will, without reason. The state completely ignores the ramifications of this decision and acts as though it were not the one restricting the movement of Palestinians, impeding the development of their economy and blocking their access to resources . This is yet another example of the arbitrary manner in which Israel acts in the West Bank. This arbitrariness governs the Palestinians' lives and forms part of the organized state violence aimed at perpetuating Israeli control over a civil population denied political rights. According to ASSAF (Aid Organization for Refugees and Asylum Seekers in Israel), as of December 2017, some 35,300 asylum-seekers live in Israel; 92% are from Eritrea or Sudan. For years, asylum-seekers were not allowed access to the recognition process as refugees. Today, less than 1% are recognized as refugees in Israel, while in the rest of the world the percentage of Eritrean and Sudanese refugees is 84% and 69%, respectively.
