Several army jeeps, and bulldozers, invaded the village and demolished the homes, for being built without a permit from the so-called "Civil Administration Office," the executive branch of the illegal Israeli occupation of the West Bank. The IOA who escorted the bulldozers and a municipal crew, forcibly removed the Alloun family from the house, physically assaulted its members and injured one of them in his leg. Municipal employees only gave resident Alloun a quarter of an hour to procure and pay 25,000 shekels in order to stop the demolition process, and later the bulldozers embarked on knocking down his house. Municipal workers removed some of the furniture from the house and gave him only five minutes to take away his belongings before they razed it to the ground while there was still many things inside. The municipality had already forced Alloun to pay a construction penalty worth 40,000 shekels in 2016. Alloun was living with his wife and kids in the house, which he built in 2011.
