- Israeli forces shot and killed Mahmoud Sami Khalil Arram, 27, near the Jabara military checkpoint, south of Tulkarem in the northern West Bank. Arram was from Khan Younis, in the southern part of the Gaza Strip, and had come to the West Bank in 2019 to treat a medical condition. Palestinians from the Gaza Strip are rarely, if ever, allowed to enter the West Bank. This utter separation of the two Palestinian Territories has ripped apart families and kept the Palestinian people divided, unable to meet in person across the Israeli-controlled barrier. The Israeli military claimed that the young man had infiltrated the colony's land, and was "trespassing on the private property of a resident". After killing him, the soldiers found a knife in Atallah's pocket and claimed that was their justification for killing him. The army then issued an order to all of the Israeli settlers living in the colony of Tuqu' to stay in their homes, saying (without evidence) that they suspected a terrorist attack was underway. The Palestinian Ministry of Health did not confirm the identity of the young man, but the Palestinian Authority acknowledged that a young man had been killed, without confirming his identity. - Israeli troops attacked Palestinian civilians near Nablus, shooting thirteen with rubber-coated steel bullets and one with live ammunition near dawn. The confrontation took place when Israeli soldiers invaded the holy site of Joseph’s Tomb east of Nablus. Joseph’s Tomb, believed to be the location where the prophet Joseph was buried, has been venerated by Samaritans since the second century CE. A community of several hundred Samaritans have lived continuously in the hills outside Nablus for 2,000 years – although they practice Judaism, they are Arabic-speaking and are not accepted by Israel as a Jewish tribe. The site has become, in recent years, a place of pilgrimage for Israeli Jewish settlers, many of whom attack Palestinians on their way into and out of what they consider to be a holy site. Some Jewish theological scholars have pointed out, “the patriarch Joseph was not an Israelite hero who became Egyptianised, but an Egyptian divinity who was Hebraised”. In the attack, dozens of Israeli settlers stormed Joseph’s Tomb, amid protection from the Israeli army, and confrontations erupted in the area. Israeli forces invaded the area near the tomb, where they were met by youth from the nearby village who began to throw stones at the invading military. The army shot at the youth with less-than-lethal and live ammunition. Ahmad Jibril, director of the Emergency and Ambulance Center in the Red Crescent in Nablus, said that clashes erupted in the vicinity of Joseph’s tomb, which led to the injury of a young man with live bullets in the abdomen. In addition, 13 people were hit with rubber-coated metal bullets, one of them in the face. 27 civilians suffered from tear gas inhalation, including people who were gassed while in their homes. The Ministry added that the soldiers first shot journalist Ali Sammoudi with a live round in the back, just as the journalists from various media agencies gathered in an open area in a clear line of sight from Israeli soldiers when the army committed its heinous crime. Sammoudi, who was shot in the back, said that he, Shireen, and several other journalists gathered near a UNRWA-run school near Jenin refugee camp and were all wearing press vests and helmets before the soldiers shot him in the back and then shot Shireen with a live round in the head. “The soldiers had a clear view of us. They knew we were journalists, yet, then deliberately targeted us with sniper fire,” Sammoudi said, “Nothing was happening there, no protests, no exchange of fire between the soldiers and the Palestinian fighters; they targeted us knowing we are all journalists – what they did was a crime and a deliberate attack.” Al-Jazeera TV issued a statement denouncing the deliberate targeting of reporters, the assassination of Shireen Abu Akleh, and the shooting of Ali Sammoudi. Al-Jazeera said Abu Akleh was assassinated and was not by accident and added that eyewitnesses and other journalists, including Shatha Hanaysha, who was standing next to Shireen, revealed that the army killed Shireen before its snipers also pinned down Hanaysha and several journalists. Dabash added that he tried to obtain all needed construction permits and had to build his seventy square/meter property to shelter his family. The Palestinian, his wife, and their three children, all below the age of eleven, were rendered homeless. While Israel continues to build and expand its colonies, Palestinian communities, and towns, in occupied Jerusalem, and various areas in the occupied West Bank, continue to be denied the right to build homes and property. - A 47-year-old Israeli soldier, identified as Noam Raz, was shot and killed by Palestinian fighters when the troops invaded the village of Burqin and Jenin refugee camp, in the Jenin District, in the northern West Bank. Raz died on the same day that a young Palestinian who was wounded by Israeli soldiers last month while praying during the Holy Month of Ramadan died of his wounds, and just two days after a world-famous Palestinian journalist, Shireen Abu Akleh, was shot execution-style by Israeli soldiers while standing with other journalists in front of a stone wall in Jenin. Shireen was shot with a live round in the head while wearing her press vest and helmet when an Israeli army sharpshooter fired one round at her. The Ministry added that the soldiers first shot journalist Ali Sammoudi with a live round in the back, just as the journalists from various media agencies gathered in an open area in a clear line of sight from Israeli soldiers when the army committed its heinous crime. Sammoudi, who was shot in the back, said that he, Shireen, and several other journalists gathered near a UNRWA-run school near Jenin refugee camp and were all wearing press vests and helmets before the soldiers shot him in the back and then shot Shireen with a live round in the head. Raz was part of a squadron of troops that attacked the family home of Mohammad al-Dab'i in the village of Burqin in a pre-dawn raid. The soldiers besieged the home for hours, while Palestinian resistance fighters gathered inside to try to protect the home. Some of those inside the home eventually came outside with their hands raised and were taken by the soldiers, but Israeli forces continued the siege and began to open fire on those that remained inside, wounding eleven. During the invasion of the Palestinian village, the invading Israeli soldiers came under fire from Palestinian resistance fighters, one of whom apparently fired a bullet that hit Raz. Israeli soldiers shot 11 Palestinians during their assault on the village. One of the Palestinians who was shot and injured was identified as Daoud Zubeidi, brother of the famous Palestinian prisoner Zakaria Zubeidi, who was one of six prisoners who managed to escape from a high-security Israeli prison last year by digging a tunnel with spoons. The high-profile prison escape was a source of embarrassment for the Israeli government, which prides itself on its security measures — arms and security equipment are Israel's biggest export. After he was shot, Raz was taken to the Rambam Hospital in Haifa with critical gunshot wounds, and later died of his wounds. Israeli troops also shot a Palestinian who allegedly threw a rock at a passing Israeli vehicle. (IMEMC 14 May 2022)

Still, the army and the police were deployed there in the dozens and prevented the family from seeing him for several hours. His brother Abdul-Rahman, a medic in Al-Aqsa, said Walid suffered a skull fracture and Hemorrhage in the brain after the soldiers shot him with a rubber-coated steel bullet in the head from a very close range. He added that his brother remained in a coma after his brain was deprived of oxygen for at least twenty minutes. Walid also suffered a skull fracture and brain hemorrhage. At the time, the doctors at the Hadassah Israeli Medical Center in occupied Jerusalem said there is nothing more they can do for the young man and

- Israel's top court Wednesday gave the army the green light to forcibly expel the residents of Masafer Yatta communities in the southern West Bank district of Hebron. Israel's High Court ruled in favor of the forcible displacement of some 1,300 Palestinians living in twelve villages or hamlets making up the Masafer Yatta area, which relies heavily on animal husbandry as the main source of livelihood, marking one of the largest expulsions carried out by the State of Israel in recent decades. The court published the ruling on Wednesday overnight, just ahead of Israel's so-called "Independence Day", Israel's "Independence Day", which saw the ethnic cleansing of 750,000 to one million indigenous Palestinians 74 years ago and turning them into refugees to establish a Jewish-majority state in Palestine, striking down the petition submitted by Masafer Yatta families against a 1981 military order designating the area Firing Zone 918. - Israeli occupation authorities announced the illegal annexation of 22,000 dunums of Palestinian-owned land to the south of Jericho city in the occupied West Bank, according to local sources. Younes Jaafar, a Palestinian rights activist, told Wafa that the land expropriated by the Israeli military order belongs to the village of Sawahra al-Sharqiya, and is part of the Israeli colonial project E1. The project, initiated first in 2012, is aimed at isolating Jerusalem from the rest of the West Bank and disrupting the territorial contiguity between the northern and southern parts of the West Bank. Muayyad Shaaban, the Head of the Palestinian Authority's Settlement and Wall Resistance Commission, condemned the Israeli announcement of the expropriation of 22,000 dunums of Palestinian land. Shaaban said the latest Israeli expropriation order was aimed to impose a fait accompli on the land by changing its features, as well as further dividing the West Bank and turning it into unconnected cantons, thus preventing the establishment of a geographically contiguous and sovereign Palestinian state. Israel uses the Absentee Property Law to claim the lands it forced the Palestinians to abandon in the 1948 and 1967 wars. It also deploys a range of tactics to declare all unregistered lands – left out by the Ottoman and British occupiers and believed to be two-thirds of the West Bank – as possible “state” land. Palestinian lands are also confiscated in the name of archaeological and tourism purposes, and if they are bought from Palestinians, it is almost always through coercive measures, according to the Israeli rights group Peace Now. Upon this decision, the Israeli occupation forces (IOF) are allowed to take all the measures they deem appropriate, including military exercises under any designation, between Palestinians' houses and expel them from the area at any time. In reality, IOF denies Palestinians' presence in the area, and they previously served 12 demolition notices to residential communities. (IMEMC 5 May 2022)

- An ambitious new plan from leaders in Judea and Samaria calls for the establishment of a new national park on nearly 1 million dunams (247,000 acres) of land between Jerusalem and the Dead Sea, which would transform the area into a tourist attraction. The area in question begins in the west of Kochav Hashahar and extends to the Herodian site in eastern Gush Etzion. According to the plan, the park will include approximately half the land bordering the Dead Sea, from Qasr al-Yahud – the traditional site of Jesus' baptism – to the Darga and Hazazon ravines. The territory is considered the only open land separating Judea and Samaria, and the political ramifications of implementing the new plan are still unclear. For decades, the Israeli Right has sought to build in the E1 area near Maaleh Adumim in an attempt to link the two regions, a step that thus far has yet to be taken. The Palestinians claim that Israeli construction in E1 would be the nail in the coffin of the two-state solution and have been building illegally in the area to stop Israel from doing the same. In Judea and Samaria, leaders are skipping over the political questions and focusing on the practical aspects of establishing the new park. They say that the land in question includes a number of tourist attractions and would primarily draw day trippers. Local sites of interest to Jews, Christians, and Muslims include the Mar Saba monastery, Qasr al-Yahud, Nabi Musa Mosque, and the remains of the Hasmonean palaces. "We want to set found a new national park, the like of which has never been seen in Judea and Samaria, and create a single network, one product," said Keren Geffen, director-general of the region. A formal plan, compiled following consultation with tourism directors, cites plans such as mobile restaurants, the promotion of a hotel site at the northern end of the Dead Sea, a joint information and reservations center. As part of the process, the land at the Ophel Archaeological Park, which lies between the City of David National Park and the western wall of the al-Aqsa Mosque is also included in the land registry. The parcel of land in question is being registered with government funding earmarked for narrowing economic disparities and "improving the quality of life of Palestinian residents of Jerusalem”. In practice, however, it is primarily being used to register land for Jews, while Palestinians are generally leery of cooperating with the effort. The registration process in the area could spark protests from the Waqf, the Muslim religious trust that administers the Mosque’s compound, and from the Palestinians and the Jordanians, among others. (HAARETZ, PALINFO 27 June 2022)

Expansion of settlements

Expansion of settlements during the month of April 2022

- The Yedioth Ahronoth Hebrew newspaper revealed that settlement council officials recently submitted a request to Israeli minister Benny Gantz to approve the building of about 4,000 housing units for Jewish settlers across the West Bank. The settler leaders accused Gantz of delaying the building of these housing units, which they described as important to address the rapid settler growth in the area and the increased demand for homes, including in isolated settlements and Haredi areas. They also accused the minister of playing politics at the expense of Jewish settlement expansion in the occupied West Bank. The Yesha council, an umbrella organization of municipal councils of Jewish settlements in the West Bank, says the plan to build 4,000 new settler homes in the area still has not been approved by Gantz. The plan, already okayed by the West Bank settlement councils, includes the gradual construction of new housing units throughout the West Bank, but it cannot take place without approval from Gantz. (PALINFO 3 April 2022)
- The Israeli Supreme Court rejected a petition submitted by the Peace Now movement and the Hebron municipality to prevent the construction of two settlement buildings in the Old City of Al-Khalil, comprising 31 housing units. Planning for the two buildings started several years ago, but was frozen for a while before the Supreme Court rejected the petition submitted in this regard, which means allowing the completion of the construction of the 31 settlement units. This plan is part of a larger plan that includes building 60 settlement units. (PALINFO 29 April 2022)

Expansion of settlements during the month of May 2022

- In the latest development in Israel's settlement expansion measures, Israel's Civil Administration in the West Bank announced on 06 May 2022, that the sub-committee of the "Judea and Samaria Higher Planning Council" is set to give its approval for planning and building 3,988 new settlement units in the meeting scheduled for next Thursday. The committee meeting will be held after the Israeli Defense Minister, Benny Gantz, responded to settlers' demands to approve the construction of new settlement projects. According to the Israeli Civil Administration's announcement, 1,452 housing units are expected to be approved for construction in the following settlements: 32 at Nokdim, 16 at Ma'aleh Adumim, 286 units at Kedumim, 90 at Dolev, 170 at Immanuel, 110 at Mevo Horon, 192 at Sha'are Tikvah, 500 units at the Elkana, and 56 at Negahot. The announcement indicated that the final approval also includes 2,536 housing units in the following settlements: 364 for Dolev, 114 for Ma'aleh Michmash, 534 units for Shvuet Rachel, 168 for Neria, 136 for Givat Ze'ev, 40 for Efrat, 92 for Zofim, 64 for Revava, 107 for Tal Menashe, 761 for the Beitar Illit, and 156 for Kiryat Arba. The approval of these settlement projects comes within the framework of political trade-offs between the far-right political parties in Israel to ensure the existence of the current government headed by Naftali Bennett, under the pretext that the Knesset members from Yamina party have required the approval of these projects in order to avoid resigning from the government coalition. Moreover, the expected approval of settlement projects came in light of the support of Israeli Prime Minister Naftali Bennett for Jewish settlement crimes, as on 05 April 2022, he said during a visit to the security service's regional command in the West Bank: "Construction is ongoing and will continue in Judea and Samaria. Freezing will not be here." (IMEMC 6 May 2022)

The so-called “High Planning Council” approved the structural plans of the illegal Mitzpe Lachish and decided to make it part of the illegal Negohot colony. The plan aims to turn the illegal outpost into a “neighborhood” in Negohot, including the construction of 158 new units. - Israel Okays Connecting Illegal West Bank Outposts to Power Grid: The plan, which would also hook up Palestinian communities to power and carve a path to legalization for both illegal Jewish outposts and Palestinian villages, ignited uproar among right-wing Israeli lawmakers. Israel's Attorney General's Office has approved connecting illegal West Bank Jewish outposts that were built without Israeli government approval to the electricity grid, in a plan that would also give more weight to diplomatic considerations. According to a legal opinion issued by Deputy Attorney General Carmit Yulis, only outposts that were built on land declared state-owned by Israel will be connected, thereby excluding outposts built on privately owned Palestinian land. The opinion also states that equal consideration must be given to Palestinian communities, in accordance with international law, meaning that those in Area C – the area of the West Bank under full Israeli civil and military control – must also be connected to the grid. However, according to political sources, the number of Palestinian villages connected to the grid will be comparatively smaller as the number of outposts. (Haaretz 13 April 2022)

Israeli Closures during the month of June 2022

- The Israeli army continued the closure of Beita junction, south of the northern West Bank city of Nablus, for the seventh day, inflicting hardships on more than 15,000 Palestinians, including farmers, merchants, and students. The closure of this main junction affects the lives of at least 15,000 Palestinians, especially since it obstructs the transfer of fruits and vegetables to the central market in the town. The market is essential because it is a distribution hub of fruits and vegetables to markets in the northern and central parts of the occupied West Bank, an issue that is causing serious losses to the farmers. The closure also obstructs the movement of students, workers, and employees as the junction leads to many surrounding areas and governorates. (IMEMC 2 June 2022)

 - One year of the Israeli government headed by Yair Lapid and Naftali Bennett: A year after the Bennet- Lapid government is founded, the settlement project deepened. Planning – There was a 26% increase, with the promotion of plans for 7,292 housing units in the settlements, compared to an annual average of 5,784 housing units in the Netanyahu governments (the average includes the years 2012 to 2020 in which information is available). Tenders – The Bennett-Lapid government has issued tenders for the construction of 1,550 housing units in the settlements, compared to an annual average of 1,343 housing units per year in the Netanyahu governments (an increase of 15%). Construction Starts – A 62% jump in construction starts in settlements with the entry of the new government. The Bennett-Lapid government furthered a number of strategically lethal plans that especially harm the chance for Palestinian development and continuity, the two-state solution and reaching a political agreement. Among other plans the government promoted a new settlement in Atarot, the E1 plan, the expansion of the National Park around the Old City, a new settlement near Ariel, a plan that connects Har Homa and Givat Hamatos, the beginning of the construction of a new settlement in Hebron (for the first time 40 years) the completion of the plan in E2, and more. New Outposts – Under the Bennett-Lapid government there were six new illegal outposts founded: Givat Hadelgel in the South Hebron Hills, Karnei Re'em in the Salfit area, Mevo'ot Jericho Farm north of Jericho, Julius Farm in the North of the Jordan Valley and the Ohavey-Ya outpost West of Bethlehem. Support for the eviction of families in East Jerusalem in favor of settlements – The Bennett-Lapid government has been called upon several times for the burning issue of displacing Palestinian families in East Jerusalem. the place where the Prophet Mohammad ascended into heaven. In what Palestinians are calling a particularly cynical move, Israeli authorities are using funds earmarked for improving the lives of Palestinians in Jerusalem to essentially confiscate land belonging to Palestinians, and take it over for Israel – forcing the Palestinians out. According to the Israeli newspaper Ha'aretz, "The first step in the registration process is the issuance of a public notice to anyone claiming ownership in the area where registration is being carried out, requiring that claimants provide proof of ownership. But for the most part, Jerusalem Palestinians have refused to cooperate out of concern that the Custodian for Absentee Property might claim ownership of all or a portion of it. The law permits the custodian to seize property if it is registered to someone who is or was residing in an enemy country. "In the last two years, following a 2018 cabinet decision, the official in charge of land registration in Jerusalem, David Rotenberg, began the registration process for a number of parcels in the east of the city. This prompted questions from human rights groups in Jerusalem, planning organizations and Ir Amim, an Israeli nonprofit whose stated mission is to make Jerusalem a more "equitable and sustainable city for the Israelis and Palestinians who share it." But Palestinians in Jerusalem have pointed out that this 'registration process' over the past two years has resulted in the confiscation of half of the Palestinian land in the Sheikh Jarrah neighborhood by Israeli authorities, in order to rid the land of its Palestinian residents and take it over for Israel. Palestinian leaders have called this bureaucratic takeover of East Jerusalem a de facto ethnic cleansing of the Palestinian indigenous population. Israeli authorities have worked over the last several years to take over all the land surrounding the Al-Aqsa Mosque, with some Israeli officials openly stating that the plan is to encircle the mosque, then take it over and destroy it. According to Ha'aretz, "As part of the process, the land at the Ophel Archaeological Park, which lies between the City of David National Park and the wall of the Temple Mount, is also being entered in the land registry. "The registration process in the area could spark protests from the Waqf, the Muslim religious trust that administers the mosque compound, and from the Palestinians and the Jordanians, among others."
