Home Demolition & Demolition threats

- Israeli soldiers demolished a Palestinian home in Doura town, southwest of Hebron, in the southern part of the occupied West Bank. Media sources said the soldiers invaded the Khallet Taha area in Doura before surrounding the home and forcing the family of eight out. The demolished property was 120 square meters; the Israeli army claims it was built without a permit from the so-called Civil Administration Office, the administrative branch of the illegal Israeli occupation. Last year, the soldiers demolished two homes owned by a member of the Taha family in the same area of the town. On Thursday morning, Israeli military and police vehicles invaded Silwan town, south of the Al-Aqsa Mosque in occupied Jerusalem and handed a demolition order to a Palestinian elder. In Hebron city, the soldiers abducted Odah Sa'id Nassar, 23, while walking in the Bab az-Zawiya area in the center of the city during protests that took place in the area. Media sources said the soldiers handed Yacoub Maragha, 71, an order to demolish his home within fifteen days. The police claimed that a 100 square/meter home was built without a permit from the city council on land the man owns. Many Palestinians in the occupied city resort to constructing their homes without permits due to Israel's continued refusal to issue these permits, especially since expanding families find themselves living in small homes or apartments. While Israel continues to build and expand its illegal colonies, Palestinian communities, towns, occupied Jerusalem, and various areas in the occupied West Bank, continue to be denied the right to build homes and property. Israel's colonies in the occupied West Bank, including those in and around occupied East Jerusalem, are illegal under International Law, the Fourth Geneva Convention, and various United Nations and Security Council resolutions. They also constitute war crimes under International Law. Article 49 of the Fourth Geneva Convention states: "The Occupying Power shall not deport or transfer parts of its own civilian population into the territory it occupies." It also prohibits the "individual or mass forcible transfers, as well as deportations of protected persons from occupied

- The Israeli occupation forces (IOF) have continued to impose a tight siege on the northern West Bank city of Nablus for the tenth consecutive day. Over the past nine days, the IOF closed all entrances to the city and prevented the Palestinian movement in both directions under the pretext of searching for wanted members of Palestinian resistance groups. The siege of Nablus has resulted in a virtual halt on life here, bringing with it substantial economic repercussions, not only for Nablus residents but Palestinians across the West Bank. The Nablus district is home to over 425,000 people spread across four refugee camps, 55 villages, and one city. Virtually all of the district's residents have been affected by the closures, as they remain stalled at checkpoints, hoping to make it to work, university, or to visit friends and family who are trapped in the city, unable to make it out.
