The IOA persists in issuing demolition orders against Palestinian homes in the West Bank and Jerusalem, under the pretext of construction without permit. Palestinians in Area C, which constitutes 60 percent of the West Bank, are not allowed to build any structures except with Israeli-issued construction permits, which are usually not granted, according to international organizations. The 1995 Oslo II Accord established the administrative division of the West Bank into areas A, B, and C as a transitional arrangement, pending a final status agreement. Many Palestinians in the occupied city resort to constructing their homes without permits due to Israel's continued refusal to issue these permits, especially since expanding families find themselves living in small homes or apartments. While Israel continues to build and expand its illegal colonies, Palestinian communities, towns, occupied Jerusalem, and various areas in the occupied West Bank, continue to be denied the right to build homes and property. Israel's colonies in the occupied West Bank, including those in and around occupied East Jerusalem, are illegal under International Law, the Fourth Geneva Convention, and various United Nations and Security Council resolutions. They also constitute war crimes under International Law. Article 49 of the Fourth Geneva Convention states: "The Occupying Power shall not deport or transfer parts of its own civilian population into the territory it occupies." Israeli forces stormed the village of al-Jawwaya and dismantled two residential tents belonging to two Palestinian residents. Forces reportedly beat up the dwellers, causing bruises to an elderly man. Forces further attacked residents with tear gas canisters, causing several people to suffocate. One of the owners, Adham al-Shawahin told WAFA that the Israeli occupation has recently escalated its attacks against the Palestinian residents in villages and locales in Masafer Yatta area, including the demolition of homes and structures, banning Palestinians from building in the area, and depriving them from electricity and drinking water to get them to leave their homes and lands for the benefit of expanding illegal settlement outposts. To be noted, the Israeli High Court on May 4 gave the army the green light to demolish 12 communities in Masafer Yatta and to displace over 1000 of their residents as part of a plan to seize their lands and homes under the pretext of turning the area into a firing zone for military training. According to local sources, bulldozers escorted by Israeli soldiers knocked down three houses, one of them under construction. The demolished homes belonged to three local residents from the village. They were razed at the pretext of unlicensed construction. Israel persists in such demolition policy, although it flagrantly violates the international law. A family of four was living in that small house, which was built about eight years ago. The homeowner added that the IOA forced him to pay about 100,000 shekels in fines for not having a construction license. Hundreds of Jerusalemite homes are threatened with demolition or appropriation as part of Israel's Judaization plans in the occupied holy city. The Jerusalemites have no choice but to build without licenses because there are no structural maps that respond to the natural increase in their numbers. The IOA also imposes building restrictions on the Palestinian natives in Jerusalem and makes it hard for them to obtain construction licenses. Israel's systematic demolition of Palestinian homes in the holy city is believed to be aimed at psychologically destroying the Jerusalemite families in an attempt to force them to move from their city. Bisharat added that the colonizers are trying to prevent the Palestinians from entering, planting, and rehabilitating their lands in preparation for illegally annexing them.

Khirbat Al-Farisiyya is subject to repeated Israeli violations that escalated nearly two weeks ago, leading to the destruction of property and the uprooting of Palestinian lands. A month ago, Israeli soldiers invaded the area, confiscated Palestinian tractors, agricultural tools, and equipment, and have been barring the Palestinians from bringing tractors or other agricultural machines into their lands. The plan envisages the expansion of the colonial settlements of Gilo, Kiryat Menachem, Neve Ya'akov, Ramot, Ramat Shlomo and Pisgat Ze'ev. It is aimed at introducing fundamental changes in the infrastructure of these colonial settlements, linking them to the light rail line and the network of settler-only by-pass roads leading to the West Bank settlements, East Jerusalem, West Jerusalem and Israel and further isolating Palestinian neighborhoods of East Jerusalem from their depth in the West Bank and preventing their viability for future growth. (WAFA 17 October 2022)
- The Israeli municipality in Occupied Jerusalem intends to prepare three settlement plans aimed at increasing the number of Jewish settlers in and around the Palestinian district of Sheikh Jarrah. According to Israel Hayom newspaper on Saturday, these plans include the construction of two apartment buildings for settlers and a commercial facility. The so-called “Israel land fund”, which is notorious for forging title deeds and property documents, is believed to be behind these settler projects. This land fund, along with other settle organizations, actively works on Judaizing the holy city and expelling its indigenous people, the Jerusalemites, from their homes. Israel’s Judaization activities started in Silwan district and its nearby areas in 1996 when the Jewish neighborhood of Ma’ale Hazeitim emerged as a small settlement on the Mount of Olives in east Jerusalem, inside the Arab neighborhood of Ras al-Amud. (PALINFO 22 October 2022)

- The Israeli siege on Shufat refugee camp and nearby Anata town, northeast of Jerusalem, continued today for the fourth consecutive day as more than 1000 Jewish fanatics stormed the Muslim holy place, Al-Aqsa Mosque in Jerusalem's Old City, performing illegal rituals, according to various sources. Life was disrupted in Shufat refugee and Anata for the last days after the Israeli occupation authorities decided to collectively punish more than 130,000 Palestinian residents of these two neighborhoods by locking them in following a shooting attack at an army checkpoint at the camp's entrance on Saturday night that left one soldier dead and another critically wounded. Since that night, the Israeli forces closed the checkpoint that leads to occupied East Jerusalem and all access roads leading to the two neighborhoods, preventing everyone, including students, ill people, elderly, and employees from leaving the neighborhoods and supplies from entering them in what some have described as a war crime and a crime against humanity. - The Israeli occupation forces (IOF) have continued to impose a tight siege on the northern West Bank city of Nablus for the tenth consecutive day. Over the past nine days, the IOF closed all entrances to the city and prevented the Palestinian movement in both directions under the pretext of searching for wanted members of Palestinian resistance groups. The siege of Nablus has resulted in a virtual halt on life here, bringing with it substantial economic repercussions, not only for Nablus residents but Palestinians across the West Bank. The Nablus district is home to over 425,000 people spread across four refugee camps, 55 villages, and one city. Virtually all of the district's residents have been affected by the closures, as they remain stalled at checkpoints, hoping to make it to work, university, or to visit friends and family who are trapped in the city, unable to make it out. - Israeli occupation forces (IOF) continued the closure on Nablus for the 12th day in a row on Saturday. IOF soldiers blocked more roads in the vicinity of Deir Sharaf village west of Nablus city. Meanwhile, calls have renewed on Palestinian youths to march in protest against the unjust closure imposed on Nablus and in support of the Palestinian resistance group,

- Lions' Den. Moreover, Palestinian demonstrators headed to the Huwara and Beit Furik checkpoints in the Nablus governorate, in response to the calls and in a bid to foil the Israeli attempts to deter the Palestinians' resistance. Earlier on Friday, Jewish settlers attacked the vehicle of the Palestinian citizen Rashid Dawabsha at the entrance of Duma town south of Nablus, breaking his car's windshield. Last week, the political factions' coordination committee called on the Palestinian masses to march to the blocked entrances of Nablus in an attempt to break the siege imposed on it. - Israeli police on Sunday imposed strict security measures on the Sheikh Jarrah neighborhood in Occupied Jerusalem, turning it into a military barracks. According to SAFA news agency, Israeli police blocked the main road axis leading to the crossroad of the so-called Tomb of Simeon the Just. The closure was imposed in the evening and will last until Monday evening to facilitate the Jewish settlers' incursions into the Tomb. Palestinian families in Sheikh Jarrah are concerned about the possible launch of new settlers' attack to coincide with the incursions into the site. In the center of the neighborhood, there is a cave carved into the rock, which is sealed and guarded, surrounded by parked vehicles, and filled with Hebrew signs. Hundreds of Jewish settlers break into the cave and perform Talmudic rituals. Since the Israeli occupation of East Jerusalem in 1967, Jewish settlers have taken over the cave and used it as a synagogue. (PALINFO 23 October 2022)
  - Israeli occupation forces (IOF) continued the closure imposed on Nablus for the 13th day in a row on Sunday. The closure came as part of the IOF collective punishment policy following the killing of an IOF soldier in a Palestinian resistance's shooting operation carried out by the Arin al-Osoud (Lions' Den) armed group near the West Bank city of Nablus. On the 11th of October, an Israeli soldier was shot and killed in a Palestinian resistance's shooting operation near the illegal settlement of Shavei Shomron established on Palestinian-owned lands northwest of Nablus. Since then, IOF soldiers have been setting up military checkpoints and mound blocks at Nablus entrances restricting the movement of citizens in and out of the city. (PALINFO 23 October 2022)
  - The Israeli army continued today to close the iron gate at a checkpoint at the main entrance to Nabi Saleh and several other area villages as its bulldozer razed nearby lands, according to local sources. They said that the army has closed the gate for several days, preventing people from reaching their villages or leaving them while forcing them to look for alternative

- routes that take double the time to leave or enter the villages. At the same time, an army bulldozer razed a privately-owned land near the checkpoint, where also an army watchtower is located, apparently to build a military camp in the area, according to the sources. (Wafa 24 October 2022)
- The Israeli army Tuesday evening sealed off secondary roads in Huwara town, south of Nablus, according to local sources. They said that the army used a bulldozer to block all secondary access roads leading to the main road of the town with earth mounds, cutting the village off entirely from the surrounding villages and towns. This came as the occupation authorities continue to impose a siege on Nablus for the fifteenth consecutive days, bringing daily life in the occupied West Bank city to a virtual halt with devastating economic impacts on its residents. For fifteen days in a row, the Israeli military has closed all eight surrounding military checkpoints to enter and exit Nablus. It has also erected dozens more flying checkpoints, and has sealed off a network of side roads across the district, which is home to over 425,000 people spread across four refugee camps, 55 villages, and one city. The military has also conducted large-scale nighttime raids in the city and the surrounding villages and "stop and searches" incursions under the pretext of searching for "wanted" Palestinians.   - Israeli forces today blocked the main entrance to the town of Azzun, east of Qalqilia, with earth mounds, according to the mayor of Azzun Ahmad Enaya. He told Wafa that Israeli forces placed earth mounds at the town's main entrance, along with the metal gate which has been closed for the past two weeks. He added that the Israeli occupation forces tighten the noose around the Palestinian residents there and force them to take alternative longer routes to reach their destinations. According to the Israeli information center for human rights in occupied territories, B'Tselem, "Restricting movement is one of the main tools Israel employs to enforce its regime of occupation. Israel imposes restrictions on the movement of Palestinians within the West Bank, and travel between it and the Gaza Strip, into East Jerusalem, Israel, and abroad." Israeli restrictions on Palestinians' movement impose a life of constant uncertainty, making it difficult to perform everyday tasks or make plans, and frustrates the development of a stable economy," said the center. - A crew from the Israeli education ministry escorted by police forces stormed on Wednesday al-Eman School in Occupied Jerusalem and searched students' bags to look for Palestinian textbooks. According to local sources, a number of parents organized a sit-in outside the Ibrahimia College in the holy city in solidarity with al-Eman School and in protest at the ongoing Israeli targeting of the Palestinian educational sector. The protesters expressed their condemnation of the Israeli raid on al-Eman School in the morning to search for Palestinian curriculum textbooks. A few months ago, Israeli minister of education Yifat Shasha-Biton revoked the licenses of six schools in east Jerusalem, claiming she took such step because of the incitement against Israel and its army in Palestinian school textbooks. At the time, she summoned the principals of those schools for a hearing, and then informed them of her decision to cancel the permanent licenses of their schools and give them conditional licenses for a year as a chance to make changes to their curriculums.
