human rights organization — and the UN Voluntary Fund for Victims of Torture grantee. Hammouri spent more than nine years in Israeli occupation prisons as a result of over six arrests. The longest stretch he spent in Israeli detention was seven continuous years between 2005 and 2011, after he was forced to choose between being deported to France for 15 years or imprisoned for seven years. Israel unlawfully designated Addameer and other Palestinian civil society organizations as “terrorist organizations” and in October 2021. (IMEMC 18 December 2022)

- The cancer-stricken Palestinian detainee, Nasser Abu Hmeid, imprisoned by Israel and serving several life terms, has died at an Israeli medical center. Nasser Mohammad Abu Hmeid, 50, from the Al-Am’ari refugee camp near the central West Bank city of Ramallah, was moved from the Ramla prison clinic to Assaf Harofeh Israeli medical center after suffering serious complications and died at the hospital. Abu Hmeid’s condition started declining in August of last year, 2021, when he complained of pain in the chest and was diagnosed with lung cancer. Israeli surgeons removed about 100 centimeters from the area of his tumor and moved him back to Asqalan prison despite his urgent need for chemotherapy and other treatment. He was left without treatment for some time before the doctors decided he urgently needed chemotherapy and other treatment, but the prison authority kept delaying his transfer to a hospital and denied him the potentially life-saving treatment. Just recently, Nasser was able to undergo more chemotherapy treatment, but his cancer has already spread and become terminal. (IMEMC 20 December 2022)
- The Israeli municipality in Occupied Jerusalem has approved a budget increase of one billion shekels for its Judaization projects in the holy city during 2023, while Hebrew news reports said that Israel’s settlement projects in the West Bank doubled after the right wing won the last elections. The municipality’s financial committee approved a budget of 6 billion shekels for its development projects in Jerusalem during the coming year, which represents an increase of more than 20 percent compared to last year’s budget. This budget is considered the highest ever in the history of the Israeli municipality in the occupied holy city and will help the occupation state to expand its Judaization projects in the holy city, especially in the field of construction and security. Meanwhile, the Times of Israel newspaper website said that extensive construction operations in illegal settler outposts started recently after the election victory of Israel’s extreme right in early November, adding that such settlement expansion activities are aimed to impose new faits accomplis on the ground. Times of Israel explained that the construction activities started mainly in the outposts whose settlers received pledges from leaders of right-wing parties to legalize them after the formation of their upcoming government. The Israeli army's civil administration, for its part, intensified its monitoring of Palestinian construction in Area C of the West Bank and its demolition campaigns against Palestinian-owned homes and structures in this area during the past two months. - Israeli "Defense" Minister Benny Gantz decided not to return the body of a veteran prisoner who died in Israeli custody to his family. Gantz decided not to release the body of Nasser Abu Hmeid to his family, citing an assessment and a "previous security cabinet ruling" that allows Israel to withhold the bodies of Palestinian prisoners who die in imprisonment and those who are believed to have committed attacks for a potential prisoner exchange. 50-year-old Abu Hmeid died at the Assaf Harofeh Israeli hospital near Tel Aviv despite longstanding calls to release him due to the Israeli policy of deliberate medical negligence and slow killing following his late diagnosis with cancer more than a year ago. He was transferred in a sudden manner from the Ramla prison clinic to the hospital after his health seriously deteriorated and he slipped into a coma. Abu Hmeid's family decided not to receive condolences from mourners unless after his body is released for burial. (IMEMC 21 December 2022)
