The invasion was carried out shortly after undercover Israeli soldiers infiltrated the refugee camp and surrounded a Palestinian home before many army vehicles invaded the area after surrounding and isolating it. The invasion led to protests before the soldiers fired a barrage of live fire, rubber-coated steel bullets, gas bombs, and concussion grenades. The soldiers shot thirteen Palestinians with live fire, including three who suffered serious wounds. The soldiers stopped Palestinian ambulances trying to enter the refugee camp and prevented medical staff from reaching the Jericho governmental hospital. The Israeli army said it fired anti-tank guided missiles toward a building in which Palestinian fighters are believed to be hiding. The soldiers abducted five Palestinians in the surrounded home, identified as Adnan Abdul-Fattah Al-Mqaiti, Odai Sa'id, Awni Jamil Lafi and his sons Mohammad and Jamil. Israeli military bulldozers demolished four Palestinian homes in the refugee camp. The army withdrew from the area without being able to abduct any of the Palestinians it invaded the refugee camp to take prisoner.
