Other

- Israeli municipality of Jerusalem officially endorsed a bid to Judaize Jerusalem's street names. Among the neighborhoods and streets targeted by the new Hebrew nomenclature is the Jabal al-Zaytoun area and another residential neighborhood in Silwan. The names are meant to change the typically Islamic character of Occupied Jerusalem and the road to Muslims' holy al-Aqsa Mosque. Analysts said the move is a barefaced infringement of the international law, which prohibits changing street names in occupied territories. The Israeli occupation authority is said to have altered at least 300 street names across Occupied Jerusalem so far. Israel's Jerusalem Mayor, Nir Barakat, has often pursued such a policy to boost Judaization schemes across Occupied Jerusalem and wipe out the Islamic and Arab idiosyncrasy of the city.
