Other

- The Israeli High Court rejected the state's request to delay the destruction of Amona by seven months. The judges ruled that the evacuation would take place by December 25, 2016, in a month and a half. High Court President Miriam Naor said: "In this case, as in past cases, the state has asked for a 'last minute' extension for the time set in our ruling. In our eyes, each extension we give, no matter how long, is never enough. We must be careful lest the deadlines we give become mere recommendations." (INN 14 November 2016)
- At a Jewish Home faction meeting, Naftali Bennett declared that the Regulation Law (also known as the Normalization Law, or the Amona Law) was the only solution to the problems in Judea and Samaria. (INN 14 November 2016)
- Residents of the outpost of Amona gathered for an emergency meeting after the High Court ruled that the destruction of their community will not be delayed, despite the Prime Minister's request to them to accede to the plea to do so and allow time to solve the problem peacefully.

Amona spokesman Avihai Boaron addressed his remarks to Prime Minister Binyamin Netanyahu. "The hand that will evacuate Amona is your hand." He said: "If you do not (pass the law to) regulate Amona then we will stand as a wall together with thousands of people in tents here at Amona." Amona outposts is scheduled to be destroyed by December 25, a little more than a month from now, and plans to relocate the residents to a nearby site were met with fierce criticism from the US.
