The Palestinian Red Crescent Society (PRCS) said its medics provided treatment to thirteen Palestinians, including children, in Sorra town, southwest of Nablus. - Israeli soldiers shot and killed two children and injured dozens of Palestinians in the northern and central parts of the occupied West Bank. The Health Ministry said the soldiers shot Adel Ibrahim Adel Daoud, 14, with a live round in the head, in the Al-Birin area, south of Qalqilia, in the northern West Bank. Daoud was rushed to a Qalqilia governmental hospital in Qalqilia and then was moved to Rafidia governmental hospital in Nablus, where he officially pronounced dead due to his serious gunshot wounds to the head. The child was shot after the army attacked dozens of Palestinians protesting on their lands near the illegal Annexation Wall in the Al-Birin area. Palestine TV said dozens of soldiers were deployed in the

- area before they fired live rounds at the Palestinians and added that a sharpshooter shot the child. It is worth mentioning that Adel's uncle, Mohammad Daoud, from Qalqilia, was abducted by the Israeli army 35 years earlier, and was sentenced to live in prison. Furthermore, Israeli soldiers killed Mahdi Mohammad Ladadwa, 17, from the Al-Mazra'a al-Gharbiyya village, northwest of the central West Bank city of Ramallah, after the Palestinians intercepted an attack by illegal Israeli colonizers against a house owned by Mohammad Saleh Shreiteh, in the village. Israeli soldiers invaded the village and started firing live rounds, rubber-coated steel bullets, gas bombs, and concussion grenades at the Palestinians who intercepted the attack. Medical sources said the soldiers killed Mahdi and shot at least two Palestinians with live fire; one was shot in the abdomen and one in the back. The Palestinian Red Crescent Society (PRCS) said the soldiers prevented its medics from reaching Mahdi, but they eventually managed to get to him, despite being attacked by the soldiers, before he succumbed to his serious wounds. The soldiers also fired live rounds and attacked several Palestinians, including medics, while trying to render the needed to a wounded young man. The PRCS said its medics treated nine Palestinians who were shot with rubber-coated steel bullets, eight whom the soldiers beat, and thirty-three who suffered the effects of tear gas inhalation. It added that the soldiers also assaulted several medics while trying to remove them from the area. (IMEMC 7 October 2022)

  - Israeli soldiers abducted five Palestinians from their homes in several parts of the occupied West Bank. In Bethlehem, south of occupied Jerusalem, the soldiers invaded Tuqu town, southeast of the city, searched homes, and abducted Mohammad Salim Al-Badan, 31, and his brother Fadi, 33. Mohammad is the secretary of the Fateh movement in the town; during the violent search of his home and the home of Hazem Mohammad Nuwwara, the soldiers confiscated thousands of Shekels. The soldiers also invaded and ransacked the homes of Thieb Al-Amour, Mohammad Ali Al-Amour, Talal Al-Amour, and Yasser Suleiman, the father of Rayyan Suleiman, 7, who died from a heart attack, on September 29, after Israeli soldiers chased the terrified child to his home, accusing him and his brother of throwing stones at them. Media sources said the soldiers also closed the Iron Gate installed at the entrance of Tuqu' town before dozens of soldiers invaded Khirbat ad-Deir and the main street in the town to secure a provocative procession by illegal Israeli colonizers who are planning to march there. - Several Palestinians were injured after the Israeli occupation forces (IOF) suppressed the weekly anti-occupation marches across the West Bank on Friday afternoon. The Palestinian Red Crescent Society affirmed that six Palestinians suffered from teargas inhalation in Jabal Sobeih in Nablus. Similar clashes also broke out in Beit Dajan town, with no injuries were reported. Meanwhile, IOF troops brutally attacked Palestinian farmers while picking olives in Wadi al-Rababa neighborhood in Silwan. Dozens of local residents performed Friday prayer in the Wadi al-Rababa neighborhood, which is threatened with confiscation, amid a large presence of Israeli forces. Earlier Friday, the IOF arrested the young man Mahmoud Samreen while picking olives in the Wadi al-Rababa lands, after brutally assaulting him along with a group of people helping him. The olive harvest season began early in the Wadi al-Rababa neighborhood for fear of Jewish settler systematic attacks on olive trees. Along the same line, a group of settlers stoned Palestinian vehicles in Tekoa town, southeast of Bethlehem, damaging many of them. The attack was carried out under the IOF protection, local sources affirmed. (PALINFO 7 October 2022)

Israeli Settler Violence

- Israeli police and settlers broke today into a Palestinian-owned land in the occupied Jerusalem neighborhood of Wadi Rababa, where they forced Palestinian landowners who were picking olives out of their lands and arrested one of them, according to local sources. Wafa correspondent said Israeli police stormed the neighborhood and forced Palestinian farmers who were picking olives in their own lands to leave, claiming that the ownership of the lands is disputed, and that far-right settler organizations have ownership claims to these lands. The Israeli police also arrested a Palestinian landowner, Mohammad Simrin, after forcing the rest of the landowners to leave. Earlier today, dozens of local Palestinian landowners and their families, accompanied by international supporters, embarked on picking olives in these lands after Israeli settlers broke into some of these lands during the previous two days and stole amounts of olive fruits with protection from Israeli police. Although the olive harvest has not officially kicked off in Palestine, including Jerusalem, many Palestinian landowners in the occupied capital have decided to start the season sooner to avoid harvest thefts by Israeli settlers.
